GIR 5009 WEST ASIA IN INTERNATIONAL POLITICS

Course Rationale

West Asia has witnessed several wars and attempts for peace after the Second World War. The availability of oil, the engine of the modern industrialized world, has made this region vital for regional as well as external powers. Local conflict in the region therefore immediately invites the attention of external powers. This course, therefore, seeks to cover the issues of war and peace in this region. This will familiarize the students with the politics of war, religious and ethnic conflicts and the role of the external powers.

Course Outcomes

On completion of this course, students will be able to interpret the issues of importance in West Asia. They will display a nuanced understanding of the Arab Israeli conflict and the role of external powers as well as the relations between India and the region. They will be able to map out the role of oil in the region.
